MISSOULA--

A consumer-oriented course entitled "Over-The-Counter Drugs" will be offered at night this fall at the University of Montana in Missoula for all interested area residents.

The course, listed as Pharmacy 599, is sponsored by the UM School of Pharmacy and the Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs (CCESP) at UM. Course instructors from UM are Dr. Frank A. Pettinato, professor of pharmacy, and Dr. M. Wafik Gouda, associate professor of pharmacy.

Registration will be at the first class session. The course will be offered from 7-9 p.m. Thursdays beginning Sept. 30 in room 102 of the UM Chemistry-Pharmacy Building. Two graduate or undergraduate credits are available at a total cost of $42, and the charge to nonparticipating class auditors will be $21.

The course, which will deal with facts and fallacies about nonprescription drugs, will provide information on product comparisons, evaluation and selection, misleading advertising and hazards of self-medication.

The course is recommended for nurses and other health professionals, teachers of home economics, health and physical education courses, and for those who wish to learn more about the drug and cosmetic products they use daily.

Additional information may be obtained at the CCESP office, room 107 of Main Hall at UM, or by phoning 243-2900. Further information also is available from Pettinato, 243-4772, or Gouda, 243-2103.
